

Yesterday City faced the mighty Liverpool at the Joie Stadium at the Etihad Campus and although City were trailing behind after 15 minutes due to a great goal by Taylor Hinds, it didn't take long for them to find their spark again when Gemma Bonner scored an own goal which put City Back on par. That was until Bunny cranked up the pressure on Liverpool and scored a hatrick, with her second goal coming at the brink of half time, it made a comeback for Liverpool look less and less likely. Especially with the weather conditions and extreme winds creating extra difficulty. It was hard enough walking through it after the match, I can't imagine how hard it must've been for the girls playing today. I for one would definitely not want to be on that pitch in that weather! Chloe Kelly then sealed the deal in the 78th minute with a nice clean penalty which increased the goal difference to 4. But don't let that fool you into thinking it was in any way an easy game, the possession was fairly even throughout the game and there were chances on both sides of the pitch which left tension around the stadium at times.
